A Celebration on Ice for Gillett Pond

Submitted by Brad Elliott

A year ago, the future of Gillett Pond, on the Richmond/Huntington border, was in doubt.

a steep ridge topped with old-growth hemlocks.

But at 2 pm, people will gather around the fire to mark the pond's salvation, engineers and commissioners from the Agency of Natural Resources to assess what would be needed to restore or repair the dam.

The answer, of course, was money – lots of it.

Rough estimates put the figure in the neighborhood of $350,000, which included the cost of acquiring the pond and dam. But the Friends saw that as a reasonable cost to protect such a widely loved, heavily used resource serving the towns around it.

A five-figure pledge quickly rolled in, and others followed. Scores of smaller contributions came as well, and on February 4, the coffers held enough to enable the Richmond Land Trust to purchase the 88-acre property from the Girl Scouts for $75,000 and cover the closing and other associated costs as well.

“People in both towns couldn’t be happier,” says Nancy Stoddard, spokesperson for the Friends group. “In terms of fundraising, we still have a very long way to go. But now the pond’s fate is in the hands of our two communities and citizens committed to saving a natural treasure and recreational resource for future generations.”

Jonesville resident Art Hamlin captured this serene view of Gillett Pond in late autumn.

The State of Vermont had asked the owner of the dam needed to maintain the pond’s water level to repair or remove the structure, deeming it unsafe.

Today the pond – a local landmark and widely used recreation site – has a new owner and a new lease on life. And on Sunday, February 22, from 1pm to 3 pm, people from both towns and beyond are invited to meet at the pond to celebrate.

In many ways, it will look like a typical winter Sunday at the pond. There will be a bonfire, skiing, snowshoeing, and with luck from the weather, skating and hockey – all framed by tree-lined shores and overlooked by and how it began with the Friends of Gillett Pond, a group formed as soon as the threat to the pond’s survival surfaced. A freak cloudburst, blockage of a culvert near the dam and road damage had brought attention to the dam. The pond’s and dam’s owner, the Girl Scouts of the Green and White Mountains saw removal of the dam as the least expensive course of action.

That’s when the Friends set about finding an alternative. The group began working with the Richmond Land Trust to raise money to purchase the dam and pond from the Scouts. The partners also consulted with state

Big Tickets on Richmond Ballot

by Greg Elias

A $2.5 million water and sewer extension that town officials say could pay for itself and attract new development tops Richmond’s Town Meeting Day ballot.

The ballot also includes elected offices, school budgets and funding for land conservation. The municipal budget will be debated and decided at the annual town meeting, as will a property tax exemption aimed at spurring redevelopment of the Old Richmond Creamery.

The water and sewer extension would run through the Gateway zoning district, a long strip of land straddling Route 2 from outside the central village to beyond Interstate 89. Voters will be asked to approve bonds to pay for the proposal, which faces uncertain support from the mobile home park that will be the largest new user.

“The project depends on a commitment to connect by a significant number of users, or by the (Riverview Commons) mobile home park,” stated a question-and-answer summary of the project compiled by Water and Sewer Commission Chairman Bard Hill. “Without commitments from property owners to connect and use the extensions, the extensions are unlikely to be built.”

The extension’s first phase begins at Camels Hump Middle School and cuts through land behind the school before exiting at the Reap property on Route 2. The second phase runs from there to the Crate Escape, a dog daycare and kennel. The final segment terminates at Riverview Commons, near the Route 117 intersection.

The total cost is an estimated $2.5 million. Town officials say the town will attempt to cut the local expense by nearly half by securing federal grants.

Officials emphasize that no property taxes will be used to fund the project. Instead, connection fees and usage charges paid by new customers will cover the bond payments.

Still, state statute requires bond financing to be decided by townwide vote. And to pursue the grants, the town first must receive bond approval.

A scoping study completed in January by Williston-based Green Mountain Engineering found that hookup fees and ongoing usage charges would generate enough revenue to make the bond payments and thus prevent rate hikes and perhaps even reduce monthly bills for existing users if the extension attracts new development.

Hill said in an email that additional connections would allow the system to broaden its user base. Richmond, population about 4,000 residents, has around 320 homes and businesses connected to municipal water and sewer. Only a tenth of the water system’s capacity is being used, the study said.

Two big problems confront the system: one, it lost its biggest customers more than 15 years ago when the Creamery closed; two, aging infrastructure recently required expensive work that caused rates to skyrocket.

If the water and sewer system can add users, Hill said, it would defray fixed costs for the entire system and perhaps produce more reasonable bills for existing customers.

Longstanding town policy requires that only ratepayers fund the water and sewer system, said Town Manager Geoffrey Urbanik. And the Water and Sewer Commission has agreed that expansion costs should be covered exclusively by new users.

The scoping study found universal support among property owners who would be served by the first two phases of the planned extension. Eight surveys were submitted, and all said they would be willing to connect to the system.

Costly Connections But it’s unclear if all the property owners understood exactly how expensive those connections could be. Hill said he feels that new users understood the costs of connecting, an issue covered during a series of public hearings on the project.

The scoping study estimated that the cost of running water and sewer lines, from the main extension to each home or business would be between $11,000 and $18,000. Those numbers include expenses related

Conserved and on the Grand List

On March 3, Richmond voters have the opportunity to continue making our town a key player in conserving its important natural, historic and agricultural resources.

In 2005 voters created a Conservation Reserve Fund for just that purpose, and in 2010 they overwhelmingly renewed it. Now it's up for renewal again, and I believe that its very successful track record on a wide variety of projects proves that is well worth renewing.

So far, the Fund has been used to protect historic windows in the Congregational Church, rebuild part of our equally historic Town Center, and give people access to one of the town's oldest cemeteries. In addition, it has protected habitat and a working hayfield along the Winooski River at the east entrance to our town, studied townwide wildlife movement corridors as an aid to better planning, and kept 187 acres of fertile farmland in productive use.

The Fund also played a critical role in the conservation of the 20-acre Willis Hill parcel. Due to its location adjacent to the elementary and middle schools, the site can now be used not only by the public for sledding but by the schools for studying wetland ecology, and expanding and improving student athletic activities.

The Fund is supported by a penny on the tax rate – a little under one-half of one percent. The beauty of that is by showing the depth of our community's support for conservation, it attracts other and even larger funding sources to projects important to our town. In fact, for every dollar taxpayers put into the fund more than three dollars in outside support was generated.

For example, the Fund contributed $64,000 to the Willis Hill project, which drew in $67,500 in support from the Vermont Housing and Conservation Board.

The $10,000 contribution from the Fund to conserve those 187 acres of farmland triggered $197,500 in additional project funding.

All told, the Fund has spent $175,424 on projects and brought our town $562,983 in additional funding. And every property conserved with Fund support has remained on the Grand List, where it continues to generate property tax revenue for Richmond for very little demand in Town services.

Richmond needs the ability to continue acting quickly and decisively on conservation needs and opportunities as they appear. On March 3, Town Meeting Day, please vote "YES" on Article 9 during all-day voting at Camels Hump Middle School. Absentee ballots are available from the Town Clerk. More information on the fund is available at tinyurl.com/ConservationReserveFund.

Preserving and Sharing Richmond's Heritage

In addition to the managing and maintaining of the Round Church, the Richmond Historical Society Executive Board continues to be involved in a number of activities. Members of the Executive Board work diligently to preserve and promote the history of Richmond. In order to continue our efforts we are in need of more involvement by members of the Historical Society and the Richmond community as at large members of the Executive Board. Any organization can become stagnant without new members and new ideas. We also have an urgent need for someone to take over the position of wedding coordinator, as Emily Johnson, current wedding coordinator, will be moving out of state in the near future. The wedding coordinator is responsible for scheduling weddings and the volunteer host/hostess for each wedding. Without this person or persons it may be difficult for the Historical Society to accommodate weddings, thus impacting our fund balance for maintenance of the church.

Please contact one of our members if you wish to be involved in preserving and sharing Richmond's history, guiding or helping with weddings at the Round Church, or in any aspect of the Historical Society. For more information, visit our website at www.oldroundchurch.com or write to us at rhs@oldroundchurch.com.

Camels Hump Middle School Winter Activities

What a winter we're having! The cold temperatures continue to afford students and families the opportunity to skate on the school's rink while the snow accumulation has been fantastic for sliding, skiing and riding. Recreational activities and academic exploration abound for students at Camels Hump Middle School.

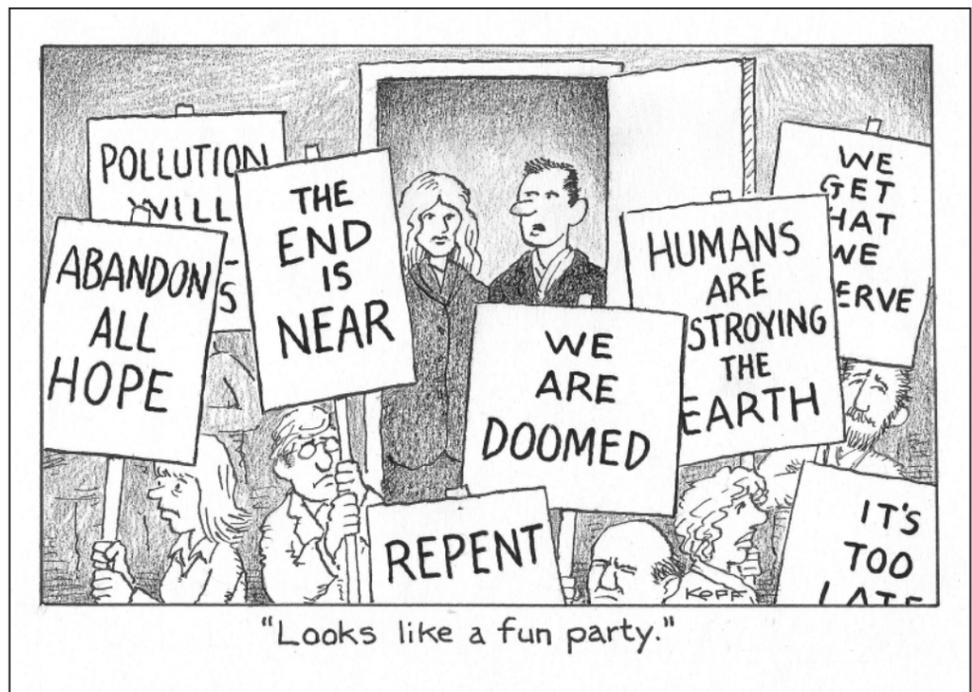

A group of our students recently participated in the First Lego League robotics competition at Norwich University. Teams from area schools had three areas of focus: robotics, project design and "gracious professionalism." Each student group designed and built a robot that could perform a specific task such as opening a door or placing a ball in a goal. It is a pleasure to congratulate the Camels Hump team for their first place in gracious professionalism and advancement to the New England regional championships in Nashua, New Hampshire.

Camels Hump Middle School has been selected to represent schools across the nation by participating in the National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP). First administered in 1969, NAEP is the largest nationally representative and continuing assessment of what students know in math, reading and science. Administered by the National Center for Education Statistics of the U.S. Department of Education, NAEP differs from state assessments as it provides a common measure of student achievement across the country. The results of NAEP are released as "The Nation's Report Card," which provides information about student achievement to educators, parents, policy makers, and the public. To view sample subject area and contextual questions, please visit <http://nationsreportcard.gov/parents.asp>.

This month, students at CHMS will participate in the Vermont Youth Risk Behavior Survey (YRBS), sponsored by the Vermont Department of Education and the Vermont Department of Health. The anonymous survey gathers information about health risk behaviors of students in grades 6-8. The survey is voluntary and parents may choose to exclude their child. The survey, developed by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention with state and local school officials, has the support of many national organizations including the National PTA. The survey includes questions about nutrition, alcohol, tobacco, and other drug use, physical exercise, injuries, and sexual behavior. Schools, communities and state agencies will use the results of the survey to evaluate programs, plan new programs and to secure future funding.

The annual meeting and budget informational meeting of the Mount Mansfield Modified Union School district is February 26 at 6:30 pm at MMU. The public is invited and encouraged to attend.

Huntington Selectboard, 3 years

Greetings to voters in Huntington,

I am excited to run for the three year position on the Huntington Selectboard and hope to be elected on Town Meeting Day, March 3rd. So, I am asking for your vote.

While I am only an eight-year resident, I have been actively involved in the community during all of these years. I think my experiences here, in the area and in a number of other places add up to giving me a good boost on some of the issues facing the town. I have spent many years (and still am involved) operating and contributing to the early childhood, family support and disabilities services fields. In addition, I have worked with a number of different people on local issues such as education finance and education planning, local governance and planning, senior independent housing development and volunteering with the Town Hall Committee as they seek and get grants to renovate and soon use the building for events and activities.

When I first moved to Huntington I wanted to get to know my community. Since the Brewster -Pierce Elementary School was right down the road, I offered to write for the Times Ink and became a reporter covering School Board meetings for several years. From there I became involved in the CESU merger issues (twice) hoping for more community based planning; and, now, I am happy to celebrate and help support the recent local decision and the CESU decision to create a modified district - and watch/support each as they unfold.

The skills I bring to the Selectboard include: grant writing, outcomes and strategic planning, consensus building, financial management and planning, program and policy development. I have an interest in roads, signs, bridges, housing, traffic calming, open spaces, conservation, coordination-communication among the School Board, the Select Board and the Planning Commission and other local resources, municipal and education tax rates/property taxes and social policy. I look forward to joining a great group of people who already sit on the Selectboard, using my skills and listening/learning from others. Thanks in advance for your consideration — and your vote.

Ellen Kane

Richmond Selectboard, 2 years

I have lived in Richmond for almost ten years with my husband and two boys. I have been a member of the Richmond Economic Development Committee for three years and was appointed to fill a Selectboard vacancy in October 2014. I am running to complete the final two years of the vacancy term because I love our town. We have great schools, a thriving downtown and an engaged community that cares about each other. I am excited about the upcoming town planning process that will engage the community to envision a new future that preserves what we value most while allowing for growth. I have extensive fundraising experience working for nonprofit organizations that support access to quality education, health care and social services for the most vulnerable populations. I know my experience securing federal, state and private grants will be an asset and I look forward to working for people of Richmond.

Andrew Hendrickson

Huntington Selectboard, 2 Years

As a 20-year resident of Huntington, I've had "serve in town government" on my to do list for a while now. Last August, in what I've jokingly referred to as a "weak moment," I agreed to serve out the remainder of Doug Graver's term. By happenstance, I've been present during most of this year's budget review and planning process. This board is deeply concerned with providing the highest quality services to the town, while spending the least amount of your tax dollars possible. They are not only concerned with this year's budget, and the next, but the longer-term effect of their decisions on future Select Boards. I am deeply impressed and eager for the opportunity to continue working with these Board members.

As for myself, I am a 24-year UVM employee, managing the information technology needs of the College of Arts and Sciences. To date those skills have primarily served the board as "AV guy", but I do have experience managing large, recurring projects as well as hefty budgets. My wife and I have raised two daughters here in town, and put in a full decade of parental participation at Brewster Pierce.

I consider myself a levelheaded listener and feel that I can contribute positively to the operation of our wonderful town. Every resident should feel that they have a voice in how their tax dollars are spent, especially those who may not attend town meeting and may feel disenfranchised. Give me the opportunity to be your advocate. I welcome your support in continuing the positive work of this Selectboard and, thus, your vote on Town Meeting Day.

Dana Cummings

Huntington Town & School Moderator, 1 year

Today, I attended a training to prepare to moderate my first Town Meeting. The tricky questions posed by moderators with many years experience humbled this neophyte. At the same time, I was inspired by the importance of the moderator's role to facilitate what Town Meeting scholar Frank Bryan calls, "Real Democracy."

It is the moderator's job to ensure that the business of Town Meeting is accomplished and to clearly explain procedure so that votes reflect the wish of the voter.

I have the necessary skills to work effectively for all of Huntington's residents. As your Town and school Moderator I will be informed about the roles, responsibilities, and processes of the job to conduct effective town and school meetings on Town Meeting Day and at any special meetings called. I will work with the Selectboard; School Board; representatives of the town's other boards, commissions, and committees to present articles for discussion and action on the floor so that any can be heard and all can cast their vote in confidence and clarity. I will work for transparent process and clear communication among town residents.

I would appreciate your votes for Town Moderator and School Moderator on Town Meeting Day.

Richmond Blood Drawings

With snowstorms forcing the cancellation of dozens of area blood drives, the need for your support couldn't be greater. If you are eligible, please walk-in, or make an appointment to let us know that you are coming. Your gift of blood may be the truest gift from the heart a patient in need receives.

On February 25, from 11:30 am to 5 pm, the American Red Cross will be holding a blood drive at the Our Lady of the Holy Rosary Parish Hall. For a shorter wait time, please schedule an appointment by calling: 1-800-733-2767.

The need is always constant; the gratification is instant; please consider giving blood.

Lincoln Bressor

Richmond Selectboard, 3 years

I have lived in Richmond my entire life and have a strong personal interest in its continued growth and prosperity. I bring a fresh perspective and an eye toward the future of what Richmond needs in order to become more attractive to young people and continue to survive. An essential part of that process is getting the next generation involved in town politics and engaged in the town's future.

I realize that the Selectboard is a group of five citizens working together to analyze information and do what they feel is best for the town. I will be a positive addition to the Selectboard because I am good at working in a team, listening to all sides of an issue and using common sense to come to an appropriate decision. I will always balance my own opinions with the will of the people and go out of my way to meet with concerned citizens.

After college, I grappled for a long time with where to live and eventually settled on Richmond; however, it was not an easy decision. I love Richmond and it was a special place to grow up but I am worried about its future. Because of this, I support smart, sustainable growth that makes Richmond an attractive place to start a career while maintaining the reasons why so many move here. Our strong community and natural beauty, coupled with our sense of business independence and a desire to keep Richmond a nice place to visit and live will hopefully be a strong pull for decades to come. I hope I have your support in the coming election. Feel free to contact me with any questions: lincolnbressor@gmail.com or (802) 363-3381

Lorrie Richland

Huntington Library Trustee, 3 years

I am currently a library trustee in Huntington and hope to continue to serve the town in this way for another three years.

I moved to Vermont in 1970, to teach and moved to Huntington in 2001. After my retirement from teaching in 2006, I searched for a way to volunteer my time. The library seemed the perfect way to support the town. It is my belief that a library is essential to a vibrant community. Our own Library houses resources for all community members, no matter their age. It provides programs that help us understand our world and the many issues that confront us locally, nationally, and globally.

I have had the privilege of working on several projects for the Library during my terms as trustee. I have worked on and organized several fund raising projects and I was very much involved in the organization of the Huntington Endowment for Library Development (HELD). This fund will help ensure the future of the library and its programs. For several years I have been the secretary to the Library's Board of Trustees, recording the minutes and writing the drafts of the Annual Reports.

The role of libraries is changing as technology continues to improve our ways of communicating. I am excited to be able to help the Huntington Public Library prepare for the future.

We are privileged to live in a community that supports a place to keep good books. I would like to be able to continue to be a part of this great Library. I thank you for your support.

On March 3, please vote "YES" for conservation

Richmond's Conservation Reserve Fund comes up for voter renewal on March 3 — and it needs a "YES" from you.

So far the Fund has helped:

- Protect local forests, wetlands and farmland, like the Andrews farmland,
- Restore key historic landmarks, like the Town Center,
- Open up new public recreation sites, like the new Willis Hill sledding area.

Every $1 spent from the Fund has attracted over $3 in matching funds - $562,983 in total. And all for just 1¢ a year on the tax rate.

Please help keep the Fund conserving Richmond's outstanding natural, agricultural and historic resources. If you value what makes and keeps Richmond so special, please vote "YES" on Article 9 on March 3 from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. at Camels Hump Middle School.

to abandoned wells and septic systems and installation of pumps, Urbanik said.

Landowners would pay for installing lines on their property as well as a one-time town connection fee. The fee for homes is based on the number of bedrooms, Urbanik said, but typically is about $2,900 for a three-bedroom house.

The connection fee for businesses also varies, he said. So an office building might pay less but a heavy user such as food processing business could be charged more than $5,000.

In any case, the extension, which would only serve 10 properties in the first two phases, heavily depends on Riverview Commons agreeing to connect. Hill called it the "key" to the project to be financially viable.

The mobile home park contains 148 lots. Still to be determined is how much the town will charge to make water and sewer connections and for ongoing usage.

Urbanik said the town is negotiating with the park because the existing rate structure is "too burdensome for a typically low income housing situation like a mobile home park."

He declined to give details about the talks, which were ongoing as of press time. Hill said it is possible an agreement will be reached before voters go the polls.

Spur for Development? In theory, extending water and sewer service westward will promote development of the area between the central village and Interstate 89, called the Gateway District. Lack of dependable water and sewer service can prevent new businesses from locating in town and stymie expansion for existing businesses.

The town is working on zoning revisions for the area, and additional development would not only defray costs for existing water and sewer users, but also ease the tax burden for all property owners.

"Responsible development of this area could generate additional property tax revenues and additional employment opportunities within the town," noted the Q&A.

The scoping study outlines a years-long timeline to complete the extension. If voters approve funding, an engineering firm would be hired almost immediately to work on design.

By July, the town hopes to obtain commitments from landowners to connect to the extension. The remainder of the summer and fall of 2015 will be used to obtain state permits. Construction is slated to begin in April 2016 and be completed by October 2017.

Other Issues At the annual town meeting, the agenda includes a $3.3 million municipal operating budget. The budget represents a 3.3 increase over the current year's spending.

Also likely to generate debate at the meeting is a measure authorizing the Selectboard to strike a tax stabilization agreement intended to jumpstart redevelopment of the Creamery site, which has sat vacant for about 15 years. The measure would allow the town to reduce or cap property taxes for no more than 10 years.

In addition to candidates running for various offices, the ballot includes a measure that would provide $44,000 in funding each year for the next five years for the Richmond Conservation Fund. The fund is used for preserving land that benefits the environment or provides recreational opportunities.

(An informational meeting on the water and sewer extension will be held Monday, March 2, at 7 pm at Camels Hump Middle School. Municipal and school budgets, as well as other Town Meeting Day issues will also be discussed during the session.)

The annual town meeting begins at 9 am at CHMS. Voting takes place between 7 am and 7 pm at the school. Early voting ballots are available at the town clerk's office. Voters can also request ballots be mailed to them by calling 434-2221.

Copies of the scoping study and other documents related to the water and sewer extension are available at the town's website, richmondvt.gov/documents/water-commission-reports. Additional information about other town meeting issues can be found on the website's homepage.

Richmond Candidates Are Generations Apart

by Greg Elias

Age and experience versus youth and enthusiasm is a cliché, but nonetheless aptly describes the only contest on Richmond's Town Meeting Day ballot.

Lincoln Bressor and Mary Houle are vying for a three-year seat on the Selectboard. Board member Ellen Kane, who was appointed in October after Ashley Lucht stepped down before finishing her term, is running uncontested for a two-year seat. None of the other candidates for school boards and other elected offices face opposition.

Bressor, a recent college graduate, has never held elected office. Houle has served multiple terms on the Selectboard and held other elected and appointed positions.

Both candidates attended Mt. Mansfield Union High School but graduated 40 years apart: Houle in 1968, Bressor in 2008.

In emailed responses to questions, each candidate outlined their biographies and addressed issues currently facing Richmond.

Houle, a longtime resident who owns a 75-acre homestead on Cochran Road, graduating from Trinity College in Burlington. She has worked jobs ranging from waitress and to real estate agent. She now is an orchardist and a master gardener. Houle said she will begin collecting Social Security in November, but plans to continue working in her greenhouse and garden.

Bressor graduated from Warren Wilson College in North Carolina in 2013. He majored in mathematics and global studies.

Bressor works building houses with his father, Gary, and his brother, Jackson. He lives with his girlfriend, Katie Byrnes, in a hillside house he built on Cochran Road.

Houle emphasized her experience, which includes not just the terms on the Selectboard but also on local and regional planning commissions and as a commissioner for the Chittenden County Solid Waste District. Most recently, she served as a Richmond lister, determining tax values for homes and businesses.

Bressor acknowledged his lack of civic experience but said his relative youth is a virtue.

"Being a young person, I know as well as anyone how few people my age live in Richmond," he said. "Only a small percentage of this age group (Taylor Yeates being an exception) is involved in town politics, which can be damaging for the town's future. If the next generation wants Richmond to grow and prosper, we need to become a part of the process of making it a desirable place for us to live."

Yeates, by far the youngest among the five-member board, was elected in 2013.

Houle proudly noted that she never missed a Selectboard meeting during her six years as a member from 2005 to 2011. She continues to attend nearly every Selectboard meeting, frequently voicing dissent or asking pointed questions from the back of the room.

Her time on the Selectboard was marked by controversy. Known for her blunt-spoken manner, Houle's critics say she sowed discontent among both town staff and fellow board members.

In 2009, some blamed her actions for the resignation of Town Administrator Ron Rodjenski and Police Chief Joe Miller. Houle has in the past and continues to dispute those criticisms.

She has said Rodjenski resigned on his own after it was alleged that he had a personal relationship with the town's finance director.

As for Miller, Houle had been assigned to evaluate his performance. She said she gave him an "average" evaluation, similar to previous performance reviews.

In any case, she has found little public support during subsequent runs for the Selectboard. In both 2011 and 2012, she lost to her opponents by 3-1 margins.

Current Issues, Similar Positions Despite differences in age and life experience, Bressor and Houle's views on issues currently facing Richmond are not far apart.

They agree that expanding municipal water and sewer service westward toward Interstate 89 is a good idea. The Town Meeting Day ballot asks voters to approve up to $2.5 million in bonds for the project.

"Water and sewer expansion serves perhaps an underserved portion of our community and will provide measured delivery of potable water and contain and disposal of waste through the Water and Sewer Department," Houle said, labeling the expansion an "environmentally sound process."

"I believe the Water/Sewer expansion is potentially a good idea, if it is executed properly," Bressor said. "It is economically desirable because adding new users will ostensibly lower the rates of the rest of the users."

As for the long-defunct Richmond Creamery, which the town has tried without success to redevelop, both candidates had doubts about a ballot measure asking voters to approve property tax exemptions to encourage development.

"If the Creamery property is developed, and there is an offer of a tax exemption, then there must be a pay back involved in the process," Houle said.

She warned of other instances in Chittenden County where where tax breaks were doled out only to have the company later shutter a facility. "No use, no exemption," she said.

Bressor was even more skeptical of the proposal. He noted the town has already offered a temporary respite from zoning rules to Creamery developers.

"I feel as though we offered quite a bit to potential developers and I do not believe we need to offer more," he said. "I do not endorse tax incentives, as there is no need for Richmond to lose out on tax money. It is a desirable property and it will develop as is."

Community Ties Each candidate has deep roots in Richmond. Bressor said except for his college years he has lived in Richmond his entire life. His father has served on numerous town boards and his mother, Jean, currently is a member of the Richmond Trails Commission. Bressor and his brothers run a soccer camp each summer on his parents' property.

"I am running, first and foremost, because I really care about Richmond and want the best for my hometown," he said.

Houle has lived in town for more than 50 years. She and her husband, Richard, have one grown son.

She expressed her commitment to the community in terms of her service on various boards and continuing involvement in civic affairs. She questioned whether the current Selectboard addresses all residents' needs rather than just the vocal minority.

"If the Selectboard hears from 10 residents who feel strongly on an issue, do the remaining 3,990 residents not count?" Houle said.

Huntington Selectboard

Reported by Ruth Blodgett

At its January 12, 2015 meeting, the Huntington Selectboard came to an agreement with Huntington Volunteer Fire Department Chief Tate Jeffrey on the Fire Department's proposed operations budget for Fiscal Year (FY) 2015-2016, which has an overall 7.11% increase.

The Board approved awarding the 2014 Municipal Planning Grant contract, for an amount not to exceed $8,500, to Tom Bailey for completing revisions to Huntington Land Use regulations.

The Board unanimously moved to authorize the Selectboard Chair to endorse the Town Clerk's New England Municipal Clerk Institute (NEMCI) scholarship request.

Another unanimous vote approved the contract between the Vermont Appraisal Company and the Town of Huntington, for appraisal services. The Listers had requested Board approval of this contract, for an amount not to exceed $12,000.

Representatives from Friends of Gillett Pond worked with the Huntington Conservation Commission (HCC) to compose an Article for Town meeting regarding Conservation Fund Criteria. The Board reviewed the wording of the proposed article, leading to a version for Town Administrator Barbara Elliott to share with the HCC.

A motion to authorize the Town Treasurer to modify the General Fund Ledger by combining the Class 2 and Class 3 Highway Bridge accounts, along with making the separate Class 2 and Class 3 Highway accounts one Highway Roads account passed.

State Senator Claire Ayer and State Representative Tom Stevens joined the Selectboard on January 19, along with Chris Campbell from the Vermont Telecommunications Authority (VTA). The lawmakers shared summaries of their current Committee work. Ayer Chairs the Senate Health and Welfare Committee, which is examining data regarding universal health coverage. Stevens, Vice-Chair of the House General, Housing and Military Affairs Committee, noted that 50,000 veterans reside in Vermont.

Campbell updated the Board on small cell coverage plans for Huntington, aiming for implementation before 2016.

Road Foreman Clinton "Yogi" Alger has received two quotes for a dump body for the proposed one-ton truck. Alger has not received quotes for the truck, but the estimate of $85,000 reflected in the FY 15-16 proposed budget seems accurate. The truck purchase is dependant on voter approval at Town Meeting.

Alger will be hiring former Huntington Road Foreman Leon Stokes as a back-up plow driver.

The Recreation Committee's request to appoint Tim Tinker and Jon Meacham to the Recreation Committee for two-year terms expiring March 2017 was approved.

The Selectboard finalized the Town Budget, the official warning for Town meeting, and its message for the Town Report. The General Fund Budget is $1,559,604. The HCC has approved the Selectboard's language for Article 9, proposing an exemption affecting use of the Conservation Fund, to be voted on at Town Meeting. A total of 10 Articles will be presented in the official Town Meeting Warning.

The Selectboard meeting of February 2, 2012 was postponed to the following Monday, due to unfavorable weather conditions.

Five nominations were received for the Olga Hallock Award for Community Service, which is presented at Town Meeting.

ALL ARE WELCOME TO ATTEND

Land Trust Annual Meeting

Martha and Bob Manning, who will present a slideshow at this year's Richmond Land Trust annual meeting and potluck based on their book. WALKING DISTANCE: EXTRAORDINARY WALKS FOR ORDINARY PEOPLE.

If there'll be one theme at this year's Richmond Land Trust annual meeting and pot-luck supper, it'll be "challenges conquered." The non-profit conservation group is inviting the public to the event to be held on March 14. This year it will celebrate the Land Trust's recent purchases of Willis Hill and Gillett Pond. The meeting and supper will be held from 6 pm to 9 pm at Richmond Elementary School.

Both Willis Hill and Gillett Pond brought major financial challenges to the group in the form of total project fundraising needs of $186,500 and $350,000 respectively. But in each case, enough supporters stepped up to enable the Land Trust to purchase the property, clearing the way for each project's next steps, including additional fundraising.

It's fitting then, that this year's speakers will be a couple whose worldwide travels have required them to overcome many kinds of challenges – Bob and Martha Manning, authors of Walking Distance: Extraordinary Hikes for Ordinary People, a book documenting those travels and the many rewards they found. When they're not out on a trail, Bob is a professor at the University of Vermont and Martha is an artist.

At the meeting, the Mannings will present a slideshow outlining the history of walking, providing tips on long distance walking, and offering first-hand descriptions and outstanding photographs of 30 of the world's great long-distance trails. They will also offer a sneak preview of several long-distance trails they will feature in their next book.

No reservations are needed, but those attending are asked to bring a dish to share plus plates and utensils. The Land Trust will supply soft drinks and coffee.

MMM Board

Reported by Diane Wester

The new MMMUSD (Mount Mansfield Modified Union School District) Board plans to meet on the first and third Mondays of the month 6:30 pm at Camels Hump Middle School. The meeting planned for February 2 was canceled due to weather.

The Vermont School Boards Association offers a set of guiding principles for school boards. CESU Superintendent John Alberghini passed this document around with a signature page. Some members objected to signing it for a variety of reasons, the chief being the part which asked Board members to support majority decisions made by the Board – a “blind allegiance,” Representative Peter Geiss (Underhill Town) called it. Richmond Representative Chip Noonan asked “What purpose are we trying to achieve? I’ve never been asked to sign one before.” Jericho Representative Diane Kirson-Glitman responded that, “It’s not a contract, but a compact with the community to let them know what we can or and not do as a Board. It think it’s cool that (it’s a job description).” The bulk of the document asked the signers be courteous, honest, discreet, respectful, etc. The document was passed around and most of the Board members signed it. It is not a binding, legal document.

Public Comment at Meetings At the last meeting, a member of the public asked to make comment during the course of a meeting when the subject came up, instead of at the beginning of the meeting when, according to the agenda the public is invited to comment. At the time, Board Chair Jon Milazzo asked the Board if there were any objections to the resident’s comments being taken out of turn, and the Board returned no objection. Milazzo asked the Board if they wished him to continue such practice- reminding them that at the Board Retreat on December 20, 2014 one of the things Val Gardner, (consultant and expert on policy governance) told them was that “board meetings are meeting in public – not meetings of the public.” Geiss said, “We want to encourage members of the public to participate.” Milazzo proposed, and the Board agreed, that if/when a member of the public in attendance wishes to address an issue during the body of the meeting, he or she should address such request to comment to the Chair of the meeting. The Board agreed this is the best practice.

Communications Between the Board and the High School Milazzo offered the Student Representatives the opportunity to attend only one meeting per month (versus two) in deference to the amount of time it takes out of their school night responsibilities. Senior Representative Julia Dunn thanked Milazzo for his offer, but said she considered responsibilities of the student representatives to include (1) reporting back to their fellow students what business occurred during the meeting, and (2) being available to the board at the MMMUSD meetings if the board needs their comments or opinions on some subject as it occurs.

Compensation for School Board Members

After another impassioned discussion with heartfelt arguments on both sides, a compromise was reached. By a show of hands, 8 members voted for (and 7 against) compensating any board member who requested it travel expenses at the $/mile rate allowed by the IRS, and child care (babysitting) expenses at minimum wage. All Richmond and Huntington representatives (save Michael Marks) voted for the motion. Breck Knauft (H) prepared the motion “I think very few people will use this, and we will gain more than we lose from it.”

Finances Committee Chair Kevin Campbell reported the committee has established it will meet the fourth Thursday of each month, 6 pm, CESU Central Office in Richmond.

The next MMU Board (middle and high schools board) meeting on February 12, 7 pm at BRMS included the initial public presentation of the budget. An additional BRMS meeting will be held February 19 at 6:30 pm. Remember, this budget has already been passed by the Board. The presentation is meant to inform the public so it may make an informed decision on Town Meeting Day – Tuesday, March 3, when it will be voted on by Australian ballot

The MMMUSD (new preK-12 district) Annual Meeting will be held at MMU Thursday, February 26 @ 6:30 pm. The budget will also be presented at this meeting.

“We cannot over-communicate this budget,” said Campbell.

There is an excellent, full color, power point presentation of the budget available online at www.cesu.k12.vt.gov.

Rumblings from Montpelier Several members of the Board are following closely the machinations of the State legislature as it attempts to reform the education system. Proposals recently heard include: dividing the state into 16 “super districts,” and one which particularly worries the board; creating block grant distribution centers around the tech centers, causing the districts to fight for tax revenue “like the Hunger Games.” Board member Diane Kirson-Glitman holds that “our position is that as being in the forefront of this change (the state-wide redistricting changes proposed) we should be protected.” (As CESU towns have become the first district in the State to follow the new law and become a larger, merged district.)

Huntington School Board

Reported by Helen Keith

At the BPMS Board meeting on February 10, the Board moved through the published agenda.

Modified Mount Mansfield Union School District's (MMMUSD) Board member Breck Knauff gave a brief initial description of the newly formed school district's process of budget development that integrated the budget work of the five pre-K-4 elementary schools and the MMU district into one budget that goes to the public, by Australian ballot, for a vote on March 3. He outlined the calculations that produced the dollar amounts owed by Huntington for its ongoing/usual use of the middle and high school services for Huntington students in grades 5-12. This figure was then used to produce the tax rates for Huntington for that portion of the pre-K to 12 education services. The full MMMUSD budget, its details for the newly formed district, the basis for determining Huntington's portion and other related data can be picked up in hard copy format from the Huntington Town Office, Brewster-Pierce School, Beaudry's Store and the Huntington Public Library as well as at the CESU office in Richmond, each school and on line at: <http://cesu.k12.vt.us/>.

Later in the meeting, CESU Superintendent John Alberghini responded to questions, walking the Board through some details in the now-published report regarding why particular line items increased or decreased. Pre-K Partnerships were brought up again related to the Huntington School District (and MMMUSD) increases in this particular budget category with comments from Board chair Megs Keir, and Board members Paul Susen and Andrea Ogilvie that people at the annual meeting might be asking about the Pre-K category, even though the Pre-K slots were estimated to be an addition of only 12 slots in the upcoming fiscal year (these slots can be in the school based program if spaces are available and/or some in approved pre-qualified Pre-K programs in the communities near-by, if that is what families want). It was noted that the influence of additional children increases the budget but decreases taxes due to an increased proportional Average Daily Attendance figure (more overall children counted in the "system"). Pre-K law is detailed and complex: nothing is mandatory for families and their children. By next year, it will be mandatory for school districts to offer Pre-K to 3- and 4-year-olds through a variety of parent-chosen pre-qualified programs (their children may already be attending these programs) that may or may not be physically located in or directly operated by the school.

The third of three presentations of the newly-formed MMMUSD budget will be held on Thursday, February 26, at 6:30 at MMU.

Keir pointed out that the Huntington School Board approved the local budget with essentially a level-funded budget (actual decrease by a small amount from the current year to next year). She noted that there is an increase in the MMMUSD budget of 2.94%. Alberghini mentioned that some of the increase is due to budgets from the merged districts that had already, for the most part, been developed, and that next year there would be a different structure to manage budgeting. He mentioned other cost drivers: wages and benefits, and the addition of Pre-K spaces (which also has the function of increasing the number of students which helps hold down tax rates) among other items.

The Annual Huntington School Board Meeting begins at 9 am this year, preceding the Town Meeting on March 3. Keir plans to meet with Moderator Dana Cummings to go over the schedule and issues. She requested the final copy of the Huntington School Board's approved draft from CESU of the budget that includes CESU assessment details. Board member Edmund Booth recalled that a resident at last year's annual meeting moved to put funding into playground safety and that the Board was responsive to that request. Keeping the budget to less than level funding was quite an achievement. Knauff stated he would not be present at the Annual Meeting, and Alberghini also stated he could not be present. Either the Assistant Superintendent and/or the Finance Office representative will be there. It was suggested that Dave Clark, Huntington representative to the MMMUSD Board, be contacted to make sure he could be in attendance.

The discussion continued regarding a family request to revise or add a policy so that families have the option to be notified in each instance when their child has a health issue at school as indicated by a visit to the school nurse. Principal Sally Hayes reported on tracking the number of health office/visits to the nurse by children and the number of calls in the last month: 256 visits that resulted in 32 calls to families (12%). The calls were based on clinical-professional judgment. Alberghini circulated a letter from the CESU Nursing Coordinator recommending no change in practice. Knauff, during community comments, stated the existing policy worked well except in one case and recommended the Board follow the advice of the professional staff. Board members expressed they want to be responsive to family suggestions related to policy and continued discussion on the issue. Alberghini recommended that instead of changing policy or procedure, the Student Handbook be updated to include the following: "If your child has health issues that necessitate communication from the school when s/he visits the health office, please contact the Brewster-Pierce administrative office." The Board approved this action to change the Student Handbook.

The Board's Building and Energy Committee is now established and includes representatives from the Board, BPMS and CESU staff, and the Huntington Energy Committee. Discussion focused on the materials provided by Ross Ogilvie, a member of the Huntington Energy Committee, on estimated energy savings for the school building. The Committee will be working together to make the building more efficient and more comfortable for children and teachers.

Governor's Institutes Weekends

One hundred and two Vermont high school students attended the Governor's Institutes of Vermont's two Winter Weekends, February 6-8 at Goddard College, and February 13-15 at Marlboro College. The students spent the weekends immersed in a positive learning community, exploring the discipline of their choice, and making friends from all over the state. At the conclusion of the programs, students presented what they learned and created to parents and members of the community.

Local students attending the Institute Weekend at Goddard College include Mira Coffey of Huntington, concentrating on Current Issues; Daniel Cox of Huntington, concentrating on Astrophotography; and Cory Raymond of Richmond, concentrating on Astrophotography.

These miniature versions of the eight summer Governor's Institutes are offered so that students sample GIV's accelerated programs and learn more about academic and artistic topics they care about. GIV fulfills its mission to empower young people with intensive, hands-on learning experiences in college settings which inspire their academic and creative passions, build confidence and leadership, and expand their senses of possibility, by serving more than 500 Vermont students every year. Applications are now being accepted for all summer Institutes. Tuition is based on a sliding scale. As a 501c3 nonprofit, the Governor's Institutes welcomes scholarship donations to help provide access for all Vermont students. Visit www.giv.org for more information.

Rep. Anne O'Brien

The House Appropriations Committee finished our work on budget adjustment act (BAA) which passed in our committee with bipartisan support and a vote of 11-0. The BAA was supported by the full House and sent to the Senate. Just like balancing the home budget, there were some items that came in over budget and some under projections, and the overall result was a decrease of $12M in the general fund spending. There were two key budget increases issues in the BAA that raised questions about sustainability and accountability. The first was the Vermont Veterans home which is located in Bennington. It is a wonderful facility which provides longterm care to Vermont Veterans. The challenge is that the census of the Vets home is lower than budgeted for and in budget adjustment that meant an increase in general funds of and additional $2M. Veterans, like many older Vermonters are choosing to stay home or live closer to their homes rather than in a nursing home like the Veterans Home. With choices for care the options for long term care an staying at home have greatly been enhanced. The current budget is not sustainable. There are structural changes with the number of licensed beds so that should help. I believe the focus should be on access and quality of long term care for our Veterans that is affordable.

The second major budget challenge is Vermont Health Connect or what is referred to as the Exchange. In the budget adjustment act there was an increase of $9M. Most of that is federal money, not general fund, however it is a significant increase over budget. We learned that the main reason for the increase was maintenance and operations. The fact that the original vendor failed and a new vendor was procured resulted in costs more than budgeted. This raised many questions and resulted in a joint hearing with House Appropriations and House Healthcare committees taking testimony on the exchange budget changes. We heard from the chief of healthcare, the commissioner of DVHA (who recently resignedly), and the chief of DII. Many of you have contacted me about your concerns, complaints and personal problems with the exchange. One by one we have worked with the administration to get them solved and I am hopeful that we can now move forward. The good news is that the system has provided for many more Vermonters to have health coverage.

Now we are deep into the FY 2016 budget review. The Governor submits to the legislature a proposed budget and we go through it line by line to determine whether we agree or not with the proposal. I am working with the House healthcare committee and we have scheduled a joint committee hearing on the DVHA budget. This is the medicaid budget and also includes the Exchange. There was an amendment on the BAA bill which requires that the Chief of Healthcare reform report to the legislature by March 11 on the progress. All of our meetings are open and you're welcome to come to the statehouse any day to listen to the proceedings. You can find all of the state budget documents at <http://www.leg.state.vt.us/jfo/default.aspx>.

Rep. Rebecca Ellis

The House Natural Resources and Energy Committee began consideration in January of a renewable portfolio standard as part of H.40, An Act Establishing a Renewable Energy Standard and Energy Transformation (RESET) Program. Twenty-nine (29) states, including every other New England state, have renewable portfolio standards. The need for a Vermont renewable portfolio standard became urgent last summer when the Connecticut public utility commission opened a docket to determine if Vermont "renewable energy credits" (RECs) are double-counted. Connecticut is expected to issue a ruling in the docket by April 2015. If the decision is adverse, Vermont utilities may suddenly find themselves unable to sell $50 million in RECs, resulting in a 6% rate increase statewide. Thus the need for a bill this session.

H.40 addresses the risk of a potential loss in REC values by establishing a renewable energy standard for Vermont utilities. The RESET program would set standards for three categories of energy resources: (1) total renewable energy, (2) new renewable distributed generation, and (3) energy transformation projects. In the first category, RESET would require that total renewable energy comprise 55% of each utility's sales by 2017, increasing to 75% by 2032. This category could be met through the purchase of energy with RECs attached, or RECs alone.

In the second category, RESET would require that new distributed generation comprises 1% of each utility's sales by 2017, increasing to 10% by 2032. New renewable distributed generation (DG) is defined as projects that have capacity of 5 MW or less and come into service after July 1, 2015. If the DG tier were met by solar only, it would require 400 MW of solar capacity, or roughly 25 MW of new solar capacity every year starting in 2017.

In aggressively promoting distributed renewable generation, Vermont is following both national and global trends. On the electric grid, distributed generation looks a lot like efficiency. Because demand is met locally, utilities do not need to reach out to the grid for supply. Like efficiency, distributed power minimizes the need for expensive transmission lines, promotes reliability, and reduces line losses. This lowers the cost of electricity for all Vermont consumers. And through distributed renewable generation, Vermonters can become their own power suppliers, keeping some of the $830 million spent annually by Vermonters on electricity here at home.

The third category of resources in the RESET program is energy transformation projects. The bill defines energy transformation projects as energy-related goods and services, other than the generation of electricity, that result in a reduction in fossil fuel consumption and a reduction in the emission of greenhouse gases. Examples include home weatherization, air source and geothermal heat pumps, electric vehicle charging stations, and energy storage. Energy transformation projects will provide more sales for utilities but, coupled with demand management to avoid peak consumption periods, can lower electricity rates by increasing revenues over the same fixed costs.

While the distributed generation category will likely have a slight upward pressure on electricity rates (less than 4% over 15 years), the energy transformation projects would likely have a slight downward pressure on lower electricity rates. The net impact is a modest net benefit for ratepayers. From a total energy perspective, one that includes electricity, transportation and heat, consumers are expected to save $275 million in total energy spending over the 15 years as a result of RESET.

If H.40 passes, Vermont will be the first state to include an energy transformation tier in its renewable portfolio standard. Vermont's electricity sector is relatively carbon-clean, and will get cleaner as we move to 75% renewable by 2032. In contrast, Vermont's transportation and heating sectors continue to emit large amounts of greenhouse gases. The RESET program will encourage the strategic electrification of the transportation and heating sectors, helping us cut 15 million metric tons of greenhouse gas emissions, and keeping us on track to achieve a quarter of our statutory goal of reducing greenhouse gas emissions 75% by 2050.

Rep. Tom Stevens

And just like that, one month of the legislative session has passed. As has been the case in each biennium I have represented this district, we hit the ground running because the issues we are addressing are of such importance to the wellbeing and sustainability of the state. From a budget gap to the health of Lake Champlain to education finance and governance reforms to health care and renewable energy, our plate is resembles a third trip to the all-you-can-eat-buffet — topped off and precariously balanced.

Because it is a new biennium, and because many of our committees have been rejiggered, we have spent a lot of time being educated about the issues each committee deals with in detail. And with a large influx of new legislators — 35 this year — this education is necessary and welcome. In the case of my committee, we have already received background on veteran's issues, affordable housing, mobile homes, emergency housing, cemeteries, alcohol and lottery law and labor issues, including addressing a teacher's right to strike. Each of these issues, to an outsider, may seem esoteric, but they are connected by the fact that Vermonters across the state are hoping we can clarify our statutes.

Besides testimony, we are being given a lot of reading to do for research. Some of this material is considered pro forma — annual reports, brochures, etc. — but a lot of it is integral to our understanding of the issues. For instance, if you would like to join us in contemplation of making our income tax system more equitable and transparent, you may want to read the Blue Ribbon Tax Structure Commission Final Report from 2011. The recommendations in the report are some of the clearest we have ever seen in reforming our tax structure — and they are so clear that they have been put aside because they have been interpreted as too disruptive to our year-to-year collection of taxes. This doesn't mean we won't address this shift this year, so I have bookmarked it and am spending time educating myself so that when it does come forward, I will know the issue better.

Over the past two years, our legislative website has become more transparent and, this year, much more user-friendly. Driven by the desire to save on paper (imagine a committee of 11 receiving numerous drafts of 25 page bills over the course of a session versus being able to call them up on a computer or iPad) and to make our work more accessible, the State has invested in making the public information we receive easier to search for and find online.

Perhaps education reform is your cup of tea? On the House Education Committee's webpage, you may read all of the same handouts or copies of testimony received by the committee. By doing so, you can begin to glean the depth of difficulty involved with trying to balance governance reforms with finance reforms, not to mention with trying to enhance achievement of successful educational outcomes. If you are concerned with the legislation surrounding background checks, you can visit the Senate Judiciary page to read supporting or dissenting documents or search from the Legislature home page for the text of the bill.

I encourage you to read along with us. I receive a lot of phone calls and emails discussing these topics and when I respond with the links for these sites, most folks are pleased that we can provide this information. Our decision making process often seems to be shrouded in mystery only because there is so much going on at the same time. Visit our website, find our committees, search for the issues you are interested in, spend your snowy nights reading and let us know what you think.

News from Area Churches

Community Church of Huntington
Larry Detweiler, 434-6715

I have a very thoughtful and generous friend that finds opportunities to give me a gift card to Barnes & Noble. This Christmas was no exception. I resolved to read a novel this year to complement my natural inclination toward nonfiction works. So when I came across NPR's top novels for the year, I settled upon ALL THE LIGHT WE CANNOT SEE by Anthony Doerr, a National Book Award Finalist. Perhaps it was NPR's endorsement or, possibly, the subliminal advertisement of December's weather and power outages that led me to my selection.

Reflecting upon my choice of novel, I remembered reading this past fall Barbara Brown Taylor's, "Learning to Walk in the Dark". How's that for foreshadowing the darkness of our winter months? December is that way for many of us. The heavy, wet snowstorm that froze us in time for the better part of a week did not help. December was a dark month. Even my solar arrays were sad.

Our Lady of the Holy Rosary Church
Father Lance Harlow, 434-2521

February marks the beginning of the Lenten season this year. The beginning of Lent, marked by Ash Wednesday, varies every year depending upon the lunar cycle. The word Lent is the modern equivalent of the Middle English word "lencten" which means "spring." That's a very hopeful word for us in Vermont in mid-February. At the time of this writing, it has been snowing for two days straight with a third day in the forecast! I have a priest colleague who is from England and is stationed in Vermont. He recently told me that when he was visiting his homeland the daffodils were already popping up—in January, mind you.

Whatever the timing of spring, Lent is always the same. It debuts on Ash Wednesday as a day of fasting, abstinence from meat, prayers and repentance in order to inaugurate the holy season devoted to prayer, fasting and almsgiving culminating with our highest holy day—Easter. The imposition of ashes on our foreheads finds its roots in the ancient Jewish custom of covering the head with ashes (and the body with sackcloth) as a sign of mourning and repentance. The head has long been a prominent place for manifesting one's religious beliefs: Catholics wear ashes one day a year; the Hasidic Jewish men have the long "payot"—those curly ringlets growing from the head in front of their ears; the Hindu women decorate the space between their eyebrows with the "bindi"; that is, the red dot; the American Indians used to have tattoos on various parts of their faces; and diverse African tribes even today have lip plates which stretch out their lips, facial scarring rituals and nose plugs. Numerous people today have tattooed, pierced, dyed and/or altered various parts of their head to communicate some kind of message—religious or otherwise.

So, at Our Lady of the Holy Rosary Church on Ash Wednesday, we find ourselves every year not wearing our "heart on our sleeve," but rather, wearing our faith on our forehead in the form of ashes which represent the outward sign of our need for interior conversion. It's our inheritance from a five thousand year old Judeo-Christian tradition. I hope that in Vermonters' yearning for cultural diversity, the ashes of Ash Wednesday will prompt many of them to a deeper level of cultural awareness and inquiry causing many to remark: "I love your ashes. What do they mean?"

Ash Wednesday

I am striding along an ice encrusted back road, snowy fields stretching cleanly
away on either side, keeping up a brisk pace
in the hopes of getting warm.

Something tells me to halt my steps and listen.
Standing still, breath clouds
rising, I hear them.

The birds are fluting a new song,
lighter and brighter
than their winterlong desultory chatter.

Somehow,
despite a silver disc of sun
in a pewter sky,
despite ice crystals falling down,
they know.

The light is informing them.

It's coming.
Rebirth, renewal, resurrection.
Their hymn of hope sings to me and my heart, recognizing the truth of it,
lifts on wings of joyful expectation.

Vermont 2-1-1 is 10 Years Old

February 11, 2015 marked the 10th anniversary of Vermont 2-1-1, the statewide information and referral program of the United Ways of Vermont.

Annually, almost 50,000 callers to Vermont 2-1-1 receive free person-to-person service from Information and Referral Specialists and trained volunteers. People call the confidential 2-1-1 helpline looking for resources to meet basic needs, like heating or utility assistance, shelter, emergency help, or to find the closest food shelf. Vermonters also call for important everyday non-emergency needs, such as developmental screening for a child, home health care for a relative, job training or free tax filing support.

Vermont 2-1-1 also becomes the number to dial during disasters and public health emergencies as the Public Information Line for The Vermont Department of Emergency Management and Homeland Security (DEMHS), and the Vermont Department of Health.

It's time to push aside the burden of winter and treat yourself to an afternoon out. Instead of looking out at the familiar Vermont winter landscape, come and view the scenery of a distant land. Bring a friend or come alone and meet a new friend.

On Monday, March 9, at 1 pm, at the Richmond Free Library, join a group of fellow armchair travelers. Richmond's travel expert and tour leader, Jim Hagan, will take you on a tour of Cambodia. You will be able to learn about the people, culture and geography of Cambodia through his stunning photography and first hand stories.

Also in March, the Community Senior Center is sponsoring its third film in the NOT TO BE MISSED MOVIE SERIES. On March 18, at 12:30 pm, BUTCH CASSIDY AND THE SUNDANCE KID will be playing at the Richmond Free Library. In this classic from 1969, Paul Newman and Robert Redford team up to rob money trains and are pursued by a relentless super posse. The combination of the chemistry between the two stars, the ironic humor and ultimate tragedy make this a film worth watching a second or third time. Subtitles and popcorn will be provided. Of course, you can watch it on your TV at home, but sometimes it's more fun to watch it in a group and share laughter and post movie commentary.

If you need a ride, call John and Pam in Richmond at 434-3658 or Debbie in Huntington at 434-3169.

Save this Date: May 15 at 7 pm, there will be a fund raising event with Captain Richard Phillips of Underhill. He'll tell his story of being hijacked on the high seas. You may have seen the movie, but there's nothing like hearing this dramatic story of survival from the man himself. This event will be open to all ages.

Business Beat

by Bill & Gina Haddock

June Banks, owner of Snaffle Sweets, has been in the wedding cake business for more than 25 years. Recently, Banks and her husband Dave moved from their Main Street home location where Banks's business was located. Banks and Dave have been planning this move from her in-home operation in Jonesville for at least three years but they only settled on a new spot in the village of Richmond in January. Banks has strong ties to Richmond and so it was important to keep her business here. She's to her clients as well as teaching classes in cake making. She has been teaching in the Burlington area for twenty years and several of her students are now teachers as well. Her classes were held at Ames Department Store and A.C. Moore which were nice venues but of course she is excited about having her own space in which to teach. Banks has some fun classes in the works including candy making, sugar eggs for Easter and even "spirited cupcakes" for people who want to include some liquors in their baking.

been active in the local 4-H, Western Slopes Business Association as well as countless volunteer committees, and she's donated literally hundreds of her yummy cupcakes to various Richmond fundraisers.

Snaffle Sweets is now reopened at 287 Main Street on the left shortly before you pass the fire station as you leave the village. This new location has served as a two story apartment building for a number of years but now the ground floor units have been converted to space for two commercial business suites. Snaffle Sweets occupies the suite at the west end of the complex, on the left as you face the building. It presents a bright blue door for an entrance. Inside there is ample space for Banks to make presentations

Banks also taught middle school children cake baking skills in her in her home in Jonesville and intends to continue doing this in this new location which is much closer to Camels Hump Middle School. Students can either walk to their six-week-long class at Snaffle Sweets after school or take the school bus— a fun after-school activity.

This new location has also created an interesting new business model for Snaffle Sweets. Banks is making the space available for temporary rentals such as an incubator business might make use. There is a spacious commercial kitchen with ample equipment for making large cakes for weddings, showers, anniversaries, birthdays and so forth which could be rented out to another home business on occasion or even to a creative bride and friends who wanted space and equipment to make their own wedding favors-half the fun is preparing for that special day. The front room is large enough for birthday parties or other festivities that could be tied into a cake making experience. Or, it could be used as a quiet and private meeting place for eight or ten people getting together for business reasons.

In addition, there is a smaller 100 foot square office with furniture for several individuals including in-house business machines – a computer with fax and internet, a printer/copier and photo printer, and telephone.

The core of Banks's business is focused on wedding and special occasion cakes and she brings a wealth of expertise and creativity to her business. And in many cases, she provides a great big dose of Yankee ingenuity as well. For example, when asked about some of the challenges in baking cakes, Banks smiled and told the Business Beat how she's been asked to create many cakes without traditional cake making ingredients. In fact, because of allergies one client requested a cake without sugar, wheat, dairy, vanilla and cinnamon and the final creation was quite delicious!

For Banks, part of the fun is doing the research needed to make the cake just perfect for the individual. Whether you need a gluten free or dairy free confection or are in search of a wedding cake with the bride and groom wedding toppers that look exactly like the real bride and groom, Banks can accommodate you. She achieves this by obtaining photos of the couple and works with another baker who can create edible figurines that look like a specific person! She also can create a cake to look like just about anything you might imagine so if your dream cake looks like Cinderella's castle or a cabin in the woods, talk to Banks.

Snaffle Sweets is opened by appointment except for Friday afternoons when the public can stop by to purchase treats. Banks can be reached at 434-2900 or email at snaffle.sweets@gmail.com. Visit Snaffle Sweets Facebook page to get the latest information about classes.

TOWN OF HUNTINGTON

Meeting Notice Conveyance of Historic Easement for the Huntington Town Hall March 16, 2015 6:30 pm • Town Office

On Monday, March 16, 2015 at 6:30 pm the Huntington Selectboard will hold a public meeting at the Huntington Town Office to discuss the Selectboard's intention to convey a perpetual historic preservation easement on the setting, significant internal features, and external features of the Huntington Town Hall located in Huntington Center. The conveyance of the historic preservation easement will be signed by the Town on or about April 20, 2015 unless a petition is filed by 5% of the voters in accordance with 24 VSA 1061 calling for a town special meeting or vote. The Town will retain ownership of the property. Costs for the conveyance of the easement will be paid from the Town Hall reserve fund.

The Town proposes to enter into Vermont Housing and Conservation Board (VHCB) Grant Agreement #2014-081-001 that provides a grant in the amount of up to $51,575 to the Town to rehabilitate the Huntington Town Hall. As a condition of VHCB funding, the Town will grant the historic preservation easement co-held by VHCB and Preservation Trust of Vermont.

The Vermont Housing and Conservation Trust Fund Act, 10 V.S.A. Chapter 15 provides grants for projects which fulfill the Act's goals including conserving and protecting Vermont's historic properties. VHCB has determined that protecting the Huntington Town Hall will advance these purposes. The c. 1903 rural meeting hall symbolizes the economic boom brought to the community by the logging industry at the turn of the 20th century and is representative of the growth of local government in Vermont. The theatre space hosted performances by the Henry Family Traveling Theatrical Company and retains several historic Henry murals.

The meeting will provide an opportunity to understand the details of the conveyance of the historic preservation easement and inform the Selectboard about the opinions of Town residents regarding the conveyance.

Got Science?

"Science is no illusion. But it would be an illusion to suppose that we could get anywhere else what it cannot give us." —Freud

Shortly after taking office, and before the opposition became so polarizing, President Obama appointed John Holdren as his science advisor. Holdren is a University of California-Berkeley engineer and physicist who has been researching and writing on energy since the late 1960s. His work included examining mathematically how much energy is needed to feed the ever-expanding human civilization.

Holdren's long list of credentials include sharing in the 1995 Nobel Peace Prize. In the 1960s he mentioned a fact that was largely unnoticed at the time: the level of CO2 in the atmosphere had risen 10% since the turn of the century.

To understand the present, let's go back to the 1984 World Population Conference. "To the shock of the host country, Mexico, diligently trying to no longer be the world's fastest-growing nation, the United States announced it would no longer support UN family planning programs... (T)he U.S. representative explained... the more people on the planet, the more consumers for the products of capitalism."

At the so-called Earth Summit in 1992, after the George H. W. Bush administration defeated the agreement supported by every other nation to limit CO2 emissions, the President showed up and said, "The American way of life is not negotiable."

In the 1960s, scientists projected serious environmental and social problems due to growing populations. These early predictions did not come to pass, however, because the Green Revolution of modern agriculture produced vast fertilized monocultures. This discovery of chemical fertilizers reinforced the belief that advances in technology would surely solve the immediate problems of increasing numbers of humans and the projected shortages of food, water, and energy.

That was then. Now scientists overwhelmingly agree that technology can't keep pace with the growing problems or begin to fix them. The agriculture miracle "postponed the timing of what increasingly now looks inevitable." In fact, current projections are revising our outlook, because the original models drastically underestimated the catastrophic timetables.

But how can this be happening? We have many highly intelligent and educated people in our society, some of whom we rely on to do the research and tell us the truth. One of our highly intelligent and educated people is our President, a man who was astute enough to appoint John Holdren as his science advisor.

Obama is widely believed to be the strongest environmentalist in the White House for decades. However, despite his talk about green energy and fossil fuels, it appears he has failed to consult his own science advisor. It seems he has been reluctant to talk about the biggest question facing us and every other living creature on the planet. As the saying goes, No one can be an environmentalist without being a populationist.

Obama's health insurance law did provide for birth control, which is a good thing to do. But he has not related the need for family planning to population or the welfare of the human race. Allowing this critical issue to be ignored is not the legacy of a statesman. Maybe now that he's in his second term he'll change that.

Big Fins

Whether it was the '57 or the '59, the record seems pretty clear that the fashion of tail fins on cars reached its peak on a Cadillac. When we talk to young people today about life being different back then, it is impossible for them to imagine how different it was.

There were no seat belts and it wasn't uncommon to see a car drive by with a kid lying across the seatback, playing in the rear window. Gas cost pennies a gallon and when you pulled into the gas station, a guy in a uniform with a tie rushed out to pump your gas, wash your windows, and "Check the oil for you today, sir?" Once you were filled up, the guy would hurry back with your change (credit cards didn't exist yet and no one used checks) and a free glass or plate to add to your collection.

Back on the road, traffic was light. Speed limits were high and if you did get stopped for speeding, the cop would walk up to the car and inquire what was the hurry? Then there would be some back and forth banter about your accuse and the officer's concern you should slow it down. If you got a warning, that would be upsetting. If you got a ticket, the policeman would brace himself for an argument.

Driving may have been a privilege according to the law, but it was a right according to society. No, it was more than a right; it was a rite-of-passage. I got my learner's permit on the day I turned 15 1/2. On my 16th birthday, I passed my driver's test, took the family car out that night, and loaded it up with my buddies for a cruise around town.

There were basically only two types of guys: those who owned a car and those who didn't get dates. The goal of every teenager was to own a car and the car you owned was a mark of status. My first was a '59 Bel Air Chevy with the horizontal fins. It was automatic, which was not cool, but had a back seat the size of a living room couch. That implied I could be a serious dude, but I wasn't. It turned out there was actually a third kind of guy. He drove an Army green, automatic Chevy and still didn't get dates, but it didn't matter. I could drive, and drive, and drive.

No air conditioning, crank down windows, doors that weighted a ton, bench seats that fit 4 abreast and a dial AM radio with only a dozen or so stations to listen to. If you wanted rock 'n roll there were, only a couple of choices.

Nothing about my Prius even resembles what I grew up thinking was a car. Yes, I enjoy the drive, it is very safe and the gas mileage is great, but it has no fins. There is no extravagance about it. It lacks the superfluous and it was the superfluous that used to make cars what they were.

Aging in Place, it's no accident, so drive safely.
